“Students Share Stories of Self, Us, and Now” Student Showcase

Public narrative is a form of storytelling designed to motivate people to act on important social issues. Over the course of the day, students from Mike McGuire’s COM-102 classes will share their public narratives—telling the story of how they came to the issue; why their story is, indeed, our story; and how we are all in a position to act.

Service Fair

Service organizations from the Chicago area will be onsite to talk about their work and provide information about volunteer opportunities.

Community Change for the Millennials

Thursday, April 23, 9:30-10:30 a.m.

The talks will be followed by a discussion focused on the videos and the service work of students in Mike McGuire and Tamarra Coleman-Hill’s COM-102 courses and their participation in the process of deliberative dialogue this semester. Please join us in thinking about your role in our larger community!
